C. Teaching and Learning Strategy

(A) The acquisition of knowledge and understanding will be delivered through a variety of strategies.

In-class Theory and Practice

- Lectures allow key topics to be introduced and investigated across each academic level. Guest speakers from business and academia will bring specialist knowledge into the classroom.
- Interactive seminars and workshops support the lectures with a strong focus on small group activities to encourage the active participation of students, develop peer learning and promote the sharing of knowledge and support amongst our diverse student body.
- Seminars and workshop sessions promote dialogue and debate and offer a participative platform for the exploration of theory and practice, and their interconnections.
- An integrated formative and summative assessment and feedback process is a key component to a student's independent acquisition of knowledge and understanding in every module on this course.

Self-managed learning

Self-managed learning activities to supplement and consolidate classroom based activity include researching and developing practical outcomes for project based work, reading recommended texts and relevant journal articles, application of knowledge to additional problem based exercises, engaging in coursework, group discussion, review of key topics and examination preparation where appropriate. Many of these activities are supported in the virtual learning environment (VLE).

In-class Practical Skills Delivery

Practical skills are delivered predominantly in taught sessions. Processes, techniques and technologies are demonstrated during lectures and workshops and are then applied, developed and/or evaluated during seminars, tutorials and critiques to reinforce learning. Key practical skills are embedded in module delivery and built throughout each level to evaluate progressive development. As students move through the course there is a shift towards the practical application of skills in more professional contexts and a greater emphasis on enterprise and entrepreneurship.

Self-managed learning

Students are required to apply practical skills taught in class to meet the requirements of project briefs on both an individual and group basis.

(B) The development of intellectual skills will be delivered via a structured and progressive strategy of support, delivered over the length of the programme.

In-class

Seminars, workshops and tutorials encourage students to develop in this area with the application of knowledge to project based learning. In-class debate allows the sharing of ideas amongst peers and the evaluation of opinions within a diverse student body to enable students to develop and evaluate logical arguments. Creativity, critical thinking, analysis and problem solving skills are central to practical project-based work. Tutorials encourage students to be accepting and open minded to new ideas and divergent ways of thinking.

Self-managed learning

Self-managed learning activities support in-class learning, and include the development of practical projects through independent research and ideas generation, reading and critique of academic journals and, especially at Level 6, their application to problem based exercises and peer debate. Links to core resources and journals will be available via the VLE and through the library.

(C) Transferable skills development is embedded within all modules through an integrated teaching and learning strategy.

In-class

Transferable skills are developed throughout seminars and workshops, using small group discussions, student led presentations, exercises and case studies.

Group work and in-class presentations promote inclusivity, active participation and effective communication skills. Learning teams are both tutor and student led to encourage appropriate and effective communication styles in a professional context and lectures evaluate the successful use of verbal and non-verbal presentation styles, particularly in relation to pitching to clients and planning high-impact presentations.

Self-managed learning

Reflective practice and work planning are skills expected to be developed out of class hours. Practical project briefs require students to meet a range of practical deadlines to encourage the development of skills in organisation and management. Learning teams assist students in developing their planning processes and are useful in monitoring individual progress.

D. Assessment

Formative Assessment

Formative assessment activities provide opportunity for developmental feedback and reflective learning and are a key feature of the teaching and learning strategy throughout the course to ensure students engage in a process of continuous learning.

Formative feedback is given at strategic points in the module by tutors and student peers. Specialist practice-based modules in fashion promotion regularly provide formative feedback in the form of group and/or individual tutorials, which are an important point of on-going contact between staff and students. Often called 'Learning Teams', group tutorials function as an intimate and supportive environment for providing critical project feedback. Supported by module tutors, each student is encouraged to actively participate in group discussions surrounding the generation, development, production and analysis of ideas.

In-class testing with peer marking and feedback is a key formative assessment method used early on in the programme's marketing modules.

Participation in class activities, presentations, group debates, peer learning, tutorials and learning teams can provide formative feedback to both staff and students as to the development of key intellectual skills.

For practice-based modules students will review their project work with tutors and peers during tutorials, learning teams and critiques. Modules with more of a marketing / business focus will incorporate formative assessment via in-class tests, observation, peer review and debate.

Summative Assessment

Summative assessment is given following the culmination of each module to indicate the level at which each learning outcome has been met.

Modes of assessment vary and aim to compliment the most current industry practices relating to core areas of practice. Often more than one mode of assessment will be required to ensure that students are able to demonstrate each learning outcome for the module.

Intellectual and research skills are mainly assessed through coursework at all levels of study. As students' progress through the course, assessment methods reflect the expectation that students will exhibit greater autonomy in their learning, refine intellectual skills, seek out and synthesise more widely diverse sources of information and approach their work in a more evaluative manner.

Summative assessment can include in-class multiple choice tests, and short answer tests, individual reports and individual or group presentation / pitches. These have specific relevance to marketing modules. Coursework for assessment may also include supporting research materials, essays, reports, development materials and / or written evaluations to demonstrate relevant module learning outcomes.

Peer and staff reviews on a variety of in-class activities can provide formative feedback to students on the development of their transferable skills. This will allow staff to reflect on student performance and feed forward into future delivery.

Transferable skills are assessed within appropriate modules through a variety of assessment criteria around self-reflection, personal and professional development creative concept development and realisation, support work required to evidence project management and organization, group work, self-evaluations, pitching and presentations.

I. Timetable information

Timetables are an extremely complex element of university administration. We endeavour to communicate final versions of timetables to students as soon as they are available. For new students, Induction is the point at which timetables are disseminated and for returning students, the beginning of September. In general, students are expected to be in classes across 3 days of the week with the remainder set aside for independent study. Wherever possible we do not teach on a Wednesday afternoon, allowing students time to participate in sports and cultural activities. Where in the rare instance changes to the timetable occur in session, the VLE (Moodle) will be used to alert students.

J. Costs and financial support

Course related costs

In addition to tuition fees, there are several items that students are expected to purchase for studying the degree. These particularly centre on materials for the practical modules and include sketch pads, pencils, note books and a portfolio. Students can also attain their own copy of Adobe Creative Suite at a reduced annual fee. PCs and Macs area available on campus for independent study, but if possible students are encouraged to bring their own laptop.

Appendix B: Terminology

[Please provide a selection of definitions according to your own course and context to help prospective students who may not be familiar with terms used in higher education. Some examples are listed below]

awarding body	a UK higher education provider (typically a university) with the power to award higher education qualifications such as degrees bursary	a financial award made to students to support their studies; sometimes used interchangeably with 'scholarship' collaborative provision	a formal arrangement between a degree-awarding body and a partner organisation, allowing for the latter to provide higher education on behalf of the former compulsory module	a module that students are required to take contact hours	the time allocated to direct contact between a student and a member of staff through, for example, timetabled lectures, seminars and tutorials coursework	student work that contributes towards the final result but is not assessed by written examination
current students	students enrolled on a course who have not yet completed their studies or been awarded their qualification delivery organisation	an organisation that delivers learning opportunities on behalf of a degree-awarding body distance-learning course	a course of study that does not involve face-to-face contact between students and tutors
extracurricular	activities undertaken by students outside their studies
feedback (on assessment)	advice to students following their completion of a piece of assessed or examined work
formative assessment	a type of assessment designed to help students learn more effectively, to progress in their studies and to prepare for summative assessment: formative assessment does not contribute to the final mark, grade or class of degree awarded to students

higher education provider	organisations that deliver higher education independent learning	learning that occurs outside the classroom that might include preparation for scheduled sessions, follow-up work, wider reading or practice, completion of assessment tasks, or revision intensity of study	the time taken to complete a part-time course compared to the equivalent full-time version: for example, half-time study would equate to 0.5 intensity of study
lecture	a presentation or talk on a particular topic; in general lectures involve larger groups of students than seminars and tutorials learning zone	a flexible student space that supports independent and social learning material information	information students need to make an informed decision, such as about what and where to study mode of study	different ways of studying, such as full-time, part-time, e-learning or work-based learning
modular course	a course delivered using modules
module	a self-contained, formally structured unit of study, with a coherent and explicit set of learning outcomes and assessment criteria; some providers use the word 'course' or 'course unit' to refer to individual modules
national teaching fellowship	a national award for individuals who have made an outstanding impact on student learning and the teaching profession
navigability (of websites)	the ease with which users can obtain the information they require from a website optional module	a module or course unit that students choose to take performance (examinations)	a type of examination used in performance-based subjects such as drama and music
professional body	an organisation that oversees the activities of a particular profession and represents the interests of its members prospective student	those applying or considering applying for any programme, at any level and employing any mode of study, with a higher education provider

regulated course	a course that is regulated by a regulatory body
regulatory body	an organisation recognised by government as being responsible for the regulation or approval of a particular range of issues and activities scholarship	a type of bursary that recognises academic achievement and potential, and which is sometimes used interchangeably with 'bursary'
semester	either of the parts of an academic year that is divided into two for purposes of teaching and assessment (in contrast to division into terms)
seminar	seminars generally involve smaller numbers than lectures and enable students to engage in discussion of a particular topic and/or to explore it in more detail than might be covered in a lecture
summative assessment	formal assessment of students' work, contributing to the final result
term	any of the parts of an academic year that is divided into three or more for purposes of teaching and assessment (in contrast to division into semesters)
total study time	the total time required to study a module, unit or course, including all class contact, independent learning, revision and assessment
tutorial	one-to-one or small group supervision, feedback or detailed discussion on a particular topic or project work/study placement	a planned period of experience outside the institution (for example, in a workplace or at another higher education institution) to help students develop particular skills, knowledge or understanding as part of their course workload	see 'total study time'
written examination	a question or set of questions relating to a particular area of study to which candidates write answers usually (but not always) under timed conditions
